

Vacancy JASON Magazine Editors 2020-2021

JASON Magazine is looking for impassioned editors to contribute to our paper magazine and online articles.

Job description

Do you like to write about contemporary subjects related to security and international affairs? Do you want to reach a larger, professional audience with your writings? JASON Magazine offers you this chance by becoming an editor. Besides writing normal essays, you can enrich your skillset by doing interviews, writing book reviews or starting your own (opinion) section.

As a JASON editor, you are expected to contribute to our paper magazine (which is published three times a year) and our ongoing online Sunday Read series. Being part of the JASON editorial office provides you with the opportunity to enrich your writing skills, explore new topics and be involved in an active institute with many passionate students and young professionals.

Job requirements

What we expect:

- Commitment to writing for both our paper magazine (3x a year) as well as our website series
- Excellent time management skills
- Knowledge of security management, international affairs or other related fields.
- Enthusiasm for journalism, shown through previous publications
- A critical mindset and clear communicative skills
- High proficiency in English (Dutch is allowed as well)
- Easy accessible by email and phone (please note that residency in the Netherlands or The Hague is NOT a requirement for this position).

What we offer:

- Close supervision by experienced and dedicated editors
- The opportunity to write more than just academic essays
- A social editorial committee that comes together for meetings, dinners and drinks

JASON Institute

JASON Institute, located in the Hague, the Netherlands, informs students and young professionals on matters of international peace and security since 1975. During its initial years of existence, the activities of JASON mainly focussed on peace and security issues within the Transatlantic domain. However, as a result of the changing global geopolitical climate, JASON gradually expanded its scope to international security in the broadest sense of the word. The institute nowadays organizes conferences, debates, lectures, simulations, study trips and excursions. Additionally, JASON Magazine publishes the free JASON Magazine three times a year.
