

Vacancy JASON Magazine Editorial Committee 2022-2023

The JASON Magazine is looking for motivated candidates to join its newly established editorial committee and take an active role in the publication of the magazine and online articles. This is a unique opportunity to get engaged with the field of international security by writing and editing articles on security issues and other related topics. It's also an opportunity to gain some editorial experience and improve your skills through organised writing workshops. Lastly, this is a social opportunity as the editorial committee will also be a fun group to be a part of, with events and drinks planned on a regular basis.

Tasks

The editorial committee will consist of a small group of writers and editors, who will contribute to the production and publication of the JASON magazine several times a year, as well as weekly online articles. You will have the opportunity to edit article submissions, both online articles and magazine articles, in addition to being a writer for the magazine. Furthermore, we will be organising writing workshops, with the opportunity to learn some valuable skills from professionals in the field. You will be expected to dedicate around two hours a week to this role (on average but flexible depending on the workload). We will also hold monthly meetings to discuss ongoing projects and tasks, which you will be expected to attend.

Requirements

We are looking for ambitious students, who are able to meet deadlines and work well within a team. You have knowledge of topics that are relevant to the JASON Institute and you have affinity with international political and security developments. You are a good writer and ideally have some editorial experience. Moreover, you are willing to work for the JASON Institute on an average of 2 hours per week.

JASON Institute

The JASON Institute, located in the Hague, the Netherlands, has informed students and young professionals on matters of international peace and security since 1975. During its initial years of existence, the activities of JASON mainly focused on peace and security issues within the transatlantic domain. However, as a result of the changing global geopolitical climate, JASON gradually expanded its scope to international security in the broadest sense of the word. Nowadays, the institute organises conferences, debates, lectures, simulations, study trips and excursions. Additionally, the JASON Magazine publishes a magazine several times a year, as well as online articles available on the website.

More information and application

For more information on JASON Institute, take a look at our website or social media. Specific questions regarding the Editorial Committee of JASON can be sent to our Editor-in-Chiefs Anne Preesman and Naledi Tilmann (redactie@stichtingjason.nl). Do you want to apply? Please send a motivation letter (max 1 A4) and resumé (max 2 A4) to the aforementioned address before September 18th.

