

Vacancy Activities Committee

JASON Institute is searching for members for its Activities Committee. Are you looking for a new challenge in the upcoming study year? Do you enjoy to organise a range of different activities, such as debates, lectures, study trips and visits to international organisations? Or do you want to gain experience and build your network in the field of international security? The Activities Committee of JASON Institute offers you all these opportunities! You can organise an event of your liking and the institute will facilitate the coordination. These activities will revolve around central issues in international peace and security, such as (dis)armament, nuclear (non)proliferation, UN peacekeeping missions, intelligence practices and cyber warfare.

We are looking for members ambitious students, who work well as a team. The Activities Committee takes up around 6 hours a week. We offer you the opportunity to organize interesting events, an activities committee that comes together for meetings and drinks, and to become part of an organization with a large network throughout the field peace and security.

JASON Institute

JASON Institute, located in the Hague, the Netherlands, informs students and young professionals on matters of international peace and security since 1975. During its initial years of existence, the activities of JASON mainly focussed on peace and security issues within the Transatlantic domain. However, as a result of the changing global geopolitical climate, JASON gradually expanded its scope to international security in the broadest sense of the word. The institute nowadays organizes conferences, debates, lectures, simulations, study trips and excursions. Additionally, JASON Magazine publishes the free JASON Magazine two times a year.
